"The Power Issue"

"One of these advertisements, captioned: 'Power Interests Are Out to Milk the Public,' has this to say:

"'In Pullman smokers, and corner grocery stores, across luncheon tables and over back fences—in the halls of Congress and on soap box platforms, the 'power issue' is the target for glib, uniformed opinion. 'Power trust,' 'absentee ownership,' 'qigantic monopoly' thunder from the throats of speakers seeking political preferment. 'Water power, God's gift to all the people, runs forever and thus producers electricity at practically no cost.' A mistaken picture of public assets diverted to private pockets . . . familiar statements hese reflecting a haze of misconception.'

"These paragraphs have a familiar ring. For here in Alabama few 'issues' have been harder ridden by aspiring office holders than the 'power question.' This horse is newly saddled every time a poli-

"The present power situation here in Alabama may not be entirely perfect. Yet these significant facts are a matter of public record:

"(1) That Alabama's power costs are among the lowest in the United States for like service.

"(2) That Alabama's state-wide domestic rates are over 15% below the national average "(3) That Alabama's state-wide domestic rates have declined over 37% in the past five years. "(4) That Alabamians in towns and cities served by Alabama Power Company now pay about 54% less than when power plants were municipally owned.

"(5) That Alabama Power Company has spent over one hundred million dollars in the state in the past ten years on additions and improvements to its plants and properties besides being largely instrumental in bringing to the state plant payrolls aggregating over 20 million dollars annually.

"These are facts. Much else that has been said and written on the so-called 'power issue' is pure fallacy which will not bear the light of unprejudiced inquiry. Now is the time to build up, rather than tear down."
